

Revolting London

London has a great history as host to people's demands for change. The annual AfL conference will investigate six revolutionary movements from 15th to 20th centuries concerning calls for economic, political and cultural change.

- Michael Hicks: Jack Cade's rebellion (1450)
- David Sutton: Spa Fields Riot (1816)
- Sean Creighton: London riots and Bloody Sunday (1886-7)
- Teresa Doherty: Women's suffrage (1914)
- David Rosenberg: Battle of Cable Street (1936)
- Dave Welsh: Notting Hill (1950s)

Our speakers, drawn from archive users and practitioners, will explore the lasting impact of these movements for social change on London and the world beyond our capital city.

Revolting London will celebrate London's history as the place to be to document your voice.

Student places from AfL

For 2009 AfL is pleased to offer six student places at the special rate of £15 (full fees £35-£50).

The successful applicants will join AfL in recording the conference by producing a paper on one of the presentations and the discussions that result from it. You are also encouraged to participate in the activities behind the scenes to organise the conference.

To apply for one of the six places please complete the application form and return it with a personal statement of your interest and suitability (no more than one side of A4) to AfL before 25 September 2009.

Revolting London | Student application terms

Student applications to the AfL conference are invited from all people who are currently engaged in formal further education, whether full or part-time.

Student applicants do not need to be a member of AfL.

Student applications must be made on the student application form and accompanied by a personal statement of your interest and suitability and a cheque for £15 made payable to 'Archives for London Ltd'.

The personal statement must not exceed a single side of A4 paper.

Student applications should be submitted as soon as possible.

Proof of student status will be sought from the applicant's referee and institution.

There are six student places available.

Student applications will be assessed by AfL's conference sub-committee whose decision is final.

Successful student applicants are required to produce a paper on one of the conference presentations and the discussions that result from it. They are also encouraged to participate in the activities behind the scenes to organise the conference.

Submission of an application is regarded as acceptance of these terms.
